

John Morris – appointed for an unexpired term on March 1, 2003 (term expires 2009)

John was a member of the Land Quality Advisory Board from its inception in the 1973 until his first appointment to the Council. John retired from the Council in 2001 and then agreed to come back. The Council approached Governor Geringer about bringing John back when EQC member, Lisa Lindemann resigned. The Council was in the midst of several complex cases and the 7th Council member was needed for these decisions. Governor Geringer appointed John to fill Lisa's term. John's years of work with the Land Quality Division, in particular his work when the surface coal program was developed, have given the Council perspective on the DEQ programs. His experience on the Council has helped newer Council members in the hearing and deliberation process. John has ranched west of Cheyenne since graduating from the University of Wyoming.
